

Colavita Launches Robocom's Warehouse Management System

Farmingdale, NY, April 30th, 2015. Robocom Systems announced today that Colavita USA has launched Robocom's Warehouse Management System in conjunction with Robocom's industry-leading wholesale distribution ERP system, Next Generation.

"Robocom's WMS is addressing a number of challenges in our distribution facility," said Joseph Napoli, Colavita's Operations Manager. "The application provides extremely accurate traceability, increased productivity, and an overall boost to our inventory accuracy."

Colavita has been running Robocom's Next Generation ERP Software since 1996. "The addition of the Warehouse Management System fully integrated with our ERP system is a major step forward," says Simon Boltuch, Colavita's Chief Financial Officer. "Real time updates for receipts and shipments are helping improve customer service and avoid data errors. The system runs very efficiently providing a boost to our bottom line. We are now in a position to continue to grow the business without adding to the headcount in the warehouse."

"Food Distribution is a major focus for Robocom," said Fred Radcliffe, President of Robocom Systems. "Robocom is constantly developing new and improved tools and software for companies like Colavita. The integration of these two major components of our Food Distribution software suite demonstrates our commitment to this market. We are already discussing the addition of other Robocom software modules with Colavita and other Next Generation ERP customers."
